Fulda, Germany

I held my candle high, as I, along with hundreds of other worshippers who had crammed into the 10th Century cathedral in Fulda, Germany for a 10 p.m. service, worshipped the coming of Lord, Jesus Christ.

All around, in a language I did not understand, stood Germans paying homage to our common God and his Son. It was a common love that bound the hundreds of us together that night. Me, the lone American service member, and the hundreds of fellow Christians.

After the worship service, I began the three mile walk to my apartment building that stood on a hillside overlooking the city of Fulda. As I was walking, I wasn't thinking about the time as I just wanted to get home for it was very cold.

Walking up Haimbacher Strasse, I reached the point where the city ended and the vast farm fields began. And there, on top of the hill, I stood alone. With my God, the Heavens above, and a moon that illuminated the snow covered farm fields.

Out of what seemed to be a clear sky, wisps of snow began falling to earth, and almost on cue, the bells from all the cathedrals in Fulda began chiming out the news of the Christ Child's birth. It was if all God's visual and audio creations had come together at this time, at this place for me, to share in the celebration. The bells. The stars. The moon. The snow. And one human being among the billions would be a witness to all of this.

It was a symphony of the senses composed but for one American service member. I must have stood on the side of the street for almost 30 minutes. Looking and listening. Not one car passed. I was truly alone.

The, I walked the rest of the way home.

Upon entering my small one room basement apartment, I opened a bottle of Blue Nun wine and poured myself a glass. Lighting a small Christmas tree, I then raised my wine glass and with tears in my eyes (for I was overwhelmed by what I had just seen and heard) I silently said "Merry Christmas."

Samuel Miles as faithless elector – committed to John Adams votes for Thomas Jefferson one Adams' supporters thoughts about that!

An Adamite. Gazette of the United States and Philadelphia Daily Advertiser. 15 December 1796

Mr. Fenno²

When the electors of the President and Vice President of the United States took their seats at the council table in the courthouse in Harrisburg, Robert Coleman, Esquire, moved, that a president or chairman should be appointed of their body, for the purpose of proceeding to business. It was a matter of astonishment to every person present, but the other fourteen electors, when he was answered, that they had already chosen a president, that the chief justice was chosen: they accordingly proceeded to business, and Mr. Adams had one solitary vote.

I hope we may be allowed to remark, that the conduct of the Jefferson gentlemen was not very delicate in making an appointment that respected (unreadable), without the privity of Mr. Coleman. Pray let our friends in Philadelphia know that we are not much obliged to them for their interest at the last general election. However, if we had got well our ticket, the electors would have been equally divided, and we would have had the mortification to be lurches by people of their own choosing. But the specimen they have given of their skill I hope not one of those gentlemen who were present in forming the Whelan³ ticket, will ever pretend to, or be present at, the forming any ticket in future, for the federal interest in this state.

I hope any gentleman, hereafter, named as an elector to support a particular interest, if he is not in that interest, will declare it publicly, and in (unreadable) that he may be understood, and the people may not be deceived. When I vote for a legislator I regard the privilege that he is to exercise his own judgment – It would be absurd to prescribe the delegation. But when I vote for the Whelan ticket, I voted for John Adams; and if Israel had (unreadable) I think he would have sense enough to know it, and candour to act accordingly.

What! Do I chuse Samuel Miles to determine for me whether John Adams or Thomas Jefferson is the fittest for President of the United States? No – I want him to act, not to think. Did the enlightened counties of #Wsaington, Northumberland and Philadelphia exert every nerve, and cheat into the bargain for men that would hesitate between the two candidates? Certainly not. When two tickets are formed does half of the slate stake up fifteen men to usurp the privilege of thinking for them on one plain question? No, there is more sense in the country than that. Did the county of York, that federal gem, turn out its honest inhabitants and give Mr. Miles three thousand votes for the purpose of furthering Mr. Jefferson's election? No, no, no.

Now the affair as to us is over, and not much to every mind, yet I honour the thirteen Jefferson electors, just as far as respects the circumstance of voting for Mr. Jefferson: the contrary would have been an imputation upon the good sense of the people who chuse them, and would have been betraying the truth. I am of the opinion that the chief justice himself (who has as good a right to change sides and think as he pleases, as any man in Pennsylvania) would seen have with us, if he had been placed (unreadable).

Fellow citizens, if we lose our republican federal President, I vote, that the federal gem, the honourable county of York, may be the first toast at all tables where good wine is drank, and good rare roast beef eaten.

An Adamite Dauphine County Dec. 9, 1796

And Samuel Miles response

Bell, Whitfield J., Jr. Patriot – Improvers. Biographical Sketches of Members of the American Philosophical Society. Vol 2. Philadelphia: American Philosophical Society, 1999.

I thought it my duty to vote for the man that appeared to me the most useful for the public good, without regard to party views. The United States were at least to appearance at that time on the eve of a war with France who made great depredation of our commerce. I knew that Mr. Adams was looked upon by the French government with a jealous eye; it was supposed that he favored the British more than the French. On the other hand I knew that the French had confidence in Mr. Jefferson. I had no doubt in my mind but both gentlemen were republicans, and would exercise the office with a view to the good and independence of the country. But I concluded that the same steps pursued by Mr. Adams and Mr. Jefferson would probably have different effects upon the French government, and I dreaded the idea of another war which might prove ruinous to this country. Upon the whole, therefore, I concluded that the administration of Mr. J would prove more likely to settle the difference with France, and voted for him accordingly. Since that I have been considered by the federalists as having deserted their cause and turned democrat as they term it. That I always was and hope ever shall be a Democrat according to the true sense of the word., I acknowledged but my sentiment with respect to governance is the same now that it has been from the beginning of the Revolution.
